

Goats keep weeds along river under control

Written by Wauneta Breeze

Wednesday, 17 July 2013 20:26 -

The village of Wauneta is taking advantage of natural weed control again this year. For some time now, the village has been allowing goats to take care of the weeds along the Frenchman River instead of using controlled burns, which were used in the past. The goats, owned by Bruce and Larry Peterson, keep the vegetation and reeds along the river in check. (Sheri Hink-Wagner | The Wauneta Breeze)